MOOD: 😊 impressed

MUSIC: typeytypeytypey (headphones at home, rats!)

Well, actually, I was hanging out in  Ometotchtli (<https://Ometotchtli.livejournal.com/>)'s den of light-up pitchurs, whining while she ignored me and got work done.

Two guys walk by with dirt on their foreheads. Moment of confusion, before, Oh, right. Day after Mardi Gras.

Mom and Dad pass them, nod. Guys go out of earshot.

Dad, gleefully (!): Marked for death!

Mom: Bureau policy prohibits making fun of people's religions.

Dad: I only make fun of the one I was raised in!

I was not ignoring you. I heard every word.

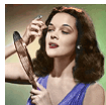

Boiling seas. Showers of fire. Something like that. Right?

If it had been that, you might have been listening.

Did you know the Pope once declared that guinea pigs were fish?

Unlike some people, I looked it up.

Oh man, that reminds me of my Catholic high school days. We always celebrated Ash Wednesday, but never Mardi Gras. It seems so unfair now that I look back on it. And the one nun who taught there would have absolutely loved celebrating Mardi Gras. She was awesome like that.

Corwin of Amber once said (in bad paraphrase, as I haven't the book handy to get the words right) that there is nothing more powerful, when you're swearing, like invocation of one's childhood gods.
